

BMAA goes west

Dorset & Somerset MC hosts the top brass.
Andy Oliver reports

SINCE the Journeyman and the Balladeer are still not speaking to each other, having taken opposing positions regarding the 'Goddin Amendment' on BMAA participation for all syndicate members, Andy Oliver went solo to a recent Devon & Somerset Microlight Club meeting.

President Bernard Bader called for order and some 50 buttocks were placed firmly on seats with as good a show of co-ordination as one can expect at a DSMC bash. The Red Arrows we may not be, but we can put on a good display of hospitality at Dunkeswell, fabled 'Home of the Brave'.

On this cold December evening we had two guest speakers: BMAA Chief Executive Geoff Weighell, and Chief Technical Officer Ben Syson. Taking off into a gentle headwind of beer-laden exhalations, Geoff opened with some aerial photos of the vast office complex that is the beating heart of microlighting in the UK. From this three-storey semi, just over the road from the Deddington Arms Hotel, a team of 10 (and two dogs) represents the 4000 members.

Geoff appeared pretty pleased to be at a meeting where there was beer instead of tea and biscuits. He must consume a lot of tea and biscuits in his line of work: I counted eight committees and bodies on which he and his team stand.

The BMAA acts as the conduit and lubrication between the eclectic mass of jolly, free-spirited pilots and the iron wheels of bureaucracy. The BMAA is not a regulator, but it smoothes the impact of regulation through intelligent presentation of intelligent argument.

Who is attempting to keep the majority of microlights inside Annex two of the European Aviation Safety Authority classification scheme?

Give yourself one mark if you answered 'the BMAA'.

Who is fighting for the right for the pilots of most types of microlights to check fly their own aircraft, subject to 150h as P1 plus minimal training, and defending self-declaration for medicals? Not the BMAA surely? Wrong.

Who lobbied successfully for the hire of microlights? 'Fraid so.

Who (in a co-ordinated response with the light aircraft, gliding, hang-gliding, and other canvas and string aviation communities) gave strong opinion in our mutual best interest on transponders and the pricing of the radio spectrum?

And who negotiated for the reduction in the Stansted transponder mandatory zone, and challenged other airspace changes proposed for Glasgow, Norwich and Salisbury Plain? This is an issue here in the west, with Exeter Airport's proposed revision almost meaning that one will be infringing EGTE while flying the EGTU circuit.

It was pointed out that airspace infringements might appear to be increasing because airports are logging every incident so as to support their own argument for airspace changes. Simultaneously, the BMAA needs to show that its members are responsible, and a threat to neither them-
